DIVIDED

Bid to bridge rich-poor split between east and west – for the sake of all our children

By Lucy Purdy

THE WOMAN charged with banishing child poverty in Haringey has spoken out about the difficulty of cracking the problem in what is London's most divided borough.

With some of the UK's most affluent wards lying just miles down the road from some of the most poverty-stricken areas in the country, the challenges facing the borough's children and young people chief, councillor Lorna Reith, are both immense and unique to Haringey.

People living in wards such as Alexandra, Crouch End and Highgate are likely to have well-paid jobs, live in expensive houses and enjoy incomes as much as £25,000 per year more than people in the east of the borough. Meanwhile, those in wards such as Northumberland Park and White Hart Lane are much more likely to claim benefits, be out of a job and live in single-parent families. While men in Alexandra have a life expectancy of 79.9 years, men in Tottenham Green ward can expect to live just 70.6 years.

With all of these problems having a serious impact upon Haringey's 57,151 children, particularly the two-thirds who live in the eastern wards, Ms Reith admits redressing inequalities is a "long, hard struggle" – but insists Haringey Council is making inroads.

"Without enough money, people face decisions such as whether to buy food and clothing or top up the electricity meter," she said. "Where I live in Tottenham, we get leaflets through the door almost every day offering instant loans with ridiculous interest rates. I know sometimes parents end up going without so their children can have something."

"If you knock on a door in Highgate, the chances are the person answering will have £25,000 more to spend per year than someone in Tottenham."

Describing the situation in Haringey during a national child poverty conference last week, Ms Reith outlined what the council is doing to improve life for children on the breadline. She said it was "crucial" to take a holistic approach and work with other agencies such as hospitals, schools and the police, and pointed to recent initiatives such as boosting benefit take-up in Haringey. Desperate families are missing out on thousands of pounds in unclaimed benefits in housing, council tax and Jobseeker's Allowance.

Nearly a third of Haringey's secondary pupils are eligible for free school meals – twice the national average. In White Hart Lane, a staggering 47 per cent of pupils are eligible for the support. And 58 per cent of children in Haringey are from ethnic minority communities, with 190 different languages spoken in the borough, making it difficult for parents to help with homework and reading, and further hampering their progress.

Ms Reith said: "We cannot tackle poverty unless we expect the same standards of service in our poor districts as we do elsewhere. Above all we need to treat people with respect."

Call for public to get tested as number of HIV cases rises

By Lucy Purdy

A WOMAN who contracted HIV from a callous ex-boyfriend who lied about being infected has spoken out and told her story as the number of new cases in Haringey climbs.

Figures released by NHS Haringey reveal a 13 per cent increase in the number of HIV patients in the borough in four years. In 2008 some 1,126 people were treated for Human Immunodeficiency Virus – which causes Aids – compared to 995 in 2005. The number of people living with HIV in the UK has trebled in the past ten years and it is thought more than a quarter of these do not realise they are affected.

In the same week as Haringey health chiefs warn public understanding of HIV and Aids is actually on the decline, 39-year-old sufferer Charity from Haringey told the Advertiser she hoped people would have the courage to get tested.

"In 2003 I decided to be tested because I was worried about the man I was with at the time," she explained.

"He used to get headaches and cold sores and I kept seeing him taking some tablets. But when I asked he told me they were sleeping pills. One day I looked through his drawers and found out what the tablets were. My friend told me I had to go and get tested.

"I thought I was going to die – I thought my boyfriend had killed me."

"I thought it would come back negative because I wasn't ill – I felt fine. When I got the results I was devastated. I thought they were lying to me. For three hours I stayed in the hospital just crying. I never confronted my boyfriend – I just broke up with him. I thought I was going to die – I thought he had killed me."

With support from close friends as well as HIV charity Body And Soul, Charity gradually began to come to terms with having the virus. She now attends regular workshops and counselling sessions as well as volunteering as a mentor to help people who have recently been diagnosed.

"People sometimes think I'm lying about having HIV because I'm not skinny and don't look really sickly. I think a lot of people think of the images they saw on the TV in the 1980s. But I've never had people treat me badly because I'm HIV-positive.

Words of encouragement:
Charity is HIV positive after her ex-boyfriend gave her the virus

I've always been very open with people and I think they appreciate that."

Charity thanked the doctors and nurses who treat her as well as Body and Soul and urged anyone who thinks they may be at risk to get tested as soon as possible.

"It takes a lot of courage," she admitted, "but you are offered counselling before and after the test. Go as early as possible because if you leave it for a long time you could develop Aids and die. But if you get tested you can get treated."

Susan Otit, acting joint director for public health in Haringey, said: "HIV remains a health concern despite the enormous advances in treatment and increased life expectancy. Condoms are still essential in preventing the spread of the disease."

Figures released last week show rates of other sexually transmitted infections including herpes, gonorrhoea and syphilis are also on the increase in Haringey.

Warning to violent bus passengers as attacks on drivers generate concern

BUS drivers working routes in Haringey are being assaulted an average of once a week, according to figures obtained by the Advertiser.

There have been 42 allegations of assaults against bus drivers and bus inspectors in the borough since January, according to information released by the Metropolitan Police's safer transport command, which deals with physical violence, threats and abuse against London's transport workers.

It comes as a woman handed herself in to police after an appeal on ITV London Tonight to find the person responsible for breaking a bus driver's arm during a serious attack in Turnpike Lane last year.

Crime-fighting charity Crimestoppers put up a reward of £10,000 last week for information about an assault in October 2008 by a woman with a young child in a pushchair. It left a female bus driver on the 221 route with a broken arm and dislocated shoulder.

Chief Superintendent Joe Royle, of the Met Police's safer transport command, said: "People who think they can threaten and assault frontline staff and get away with it are wrong. We are determined that all offenders are brought to justice and we will leave no stone unturned in our endeavour to do so."

Fears: Attacks on drivers are common

Whittington threat in the spotlight as MPs debate in Commons

By Lucy Purdy

THE future of Whittington Hospital's accident and emergency department has taken centre stage during a fierce parliamentary debate.

Minister for health services Mike O'Brien warned that "vague and woolly" proposals would only serve to make people anxious, when questioned about a possible closure of the A&E department at the cherished Highgate Hill hospital.

Thousands of people from Haringey, Barnet, Enfield and Islington have signed petitions asking that proposals to downgrade local hospitals be scrapped. Three weeks ago, a letter written by North Central London chief executive Rachel Tyndall was leaked which set out four options for a reshuffle of hospitals in north London. The Whittington was downgraded to a "local hospital" in each one, meaning it would have no emergency department or specialist services. Under one of the proposals, North Middlesex University Hospital, in Edmonton, could also be downgraded to a local hospital with an A&E – but it would not be 24-hour.

The debate on December 2 was secured by Islington North MP Jeremy Corbyn. Speaking in parliament, he said: "Arguments have been put that the casualty units are all very close together so a closure is OK – it does not matter. "Well, it does matter. It matters because of the safety of the people who live around that area, the safety of the community and the ability of the NHS to provide services for people who desperately need them."

Describing the Whittington, where a new £30million wing opened in 2006, Mr Corbyn added: "We have good services, good treatment and a good hospital and we want it to carry on that way. If we lose the A&E department, everything else is at risk."

Hornsey and Wood Green MP Lynne Featherstone added: "It is important that its other services are not diminished because otherwise the Whittington will wither on the vine. It cannot have escaped people's notice that the land on which it sits is worth a fortune."

Mr O'Brien responded that hospital chiefs would have to justify the cost of any consultation: "If there are no clear proposals, and that is what I am led to believe, the concern is why managers have decided to busy themselves consulting on proposals that do not at the moment really exist."

"Vague proposals that have no clarity about them serve little purpose other than to raise a lot of public concern. Something as vague and woolly as that is a recipe for considerable concern."

YOUR SAY

What residents have said on David Lammy's website

As a senior member of medical staff in one of the emergency departments, from a clinical perspective I believe that the downgrading of A&E will be severely detrimental to patient safety."

An area with a high level of ill-health needs its hospitals and care facilities expanded – not contracted. Is the A&E at North Mid not busy enough?"

I simply do not understand how you can even countenance the idea of closing these facilities that are relied upon so heavily by an already under-served community. Are you insane?"

We cannot stand by and see this done to our hospitals. People will lose their lives if this goes ahead. We must get behind this campaign to save our hospitals."

The reduction in local hospital facilities was bad enough, leaving us with no local general hospital. It will be much worse if the North Mid or the Whittington lost their A&E services."

Bakery stock's on a

A BEAUTIFUL sugary, spicy scent blended with the familiar smell of freshly baked bread greets you as you walk through the door and out of the icy wind rushing down Crouch End Broadway.

By Lucy Purdy

It soon became clear that it wasn't the best idea to enter Dunn's bakery after missing breakfast, as everywhere you turn there are beautifully crafted cakes, loaves and pies – tempting as much to the eye as to the taste buds. From tiny petits fours adorned with cherries and almonds glistening with sugar to crisp leaves of golden pastry and luxuriously rich Christmas cakes – all surrounded by scores of cheerful gingerbread cookies in the shapes of snowmen, Christmas trees and reindeers.

"I'm the fifth generation of bakers in my family. My great-grandfather started the first family business in Highgate Hill in 1827," explained owner Christopher Freeman, as we duck under trays of warm mince pies being rushed from the ovens and onto the shelves.

"There are certainly fewer independent bakeries around these days," he said.

"It is only the independent shops that make any place substantially different. I like to think we offer fresh products and a good service here and people seem to like it. I suppose we wouldn't have been here all this time otherwise."

Behind the scenes at Dunn's is a myriad of rooms where Christopher's expert staff – many of whom have trained with him over years – make all the bakery's products from scratch. He takes us on a tour around these wonderful, half-lit corners which reek of ginger, cinnamon, chocolate and marzipan and ruefully admits he no longer notices the smells, "except when I come back after holidays".

Dunn's prices may be slightly higher than at your average high street bakery, but the quality makes that worthwhile.

The "finest and freshest" ingredients are used – sourced locally when possible – and the care the bakers take over every mouthful is clear.

Confectionery baker Mark Legg is filling mince pies with Dunn's own mincemeat when we visit – a recipe containing sultanas, raisins, currants, grated apple and lemon zest.

Across the room, chief baker Keller Santos prepares dough for 70 loaves made with flour from grain grown in Essex and milled in Ponders End. Though the nature of the work requires 4am starts it also means early finishes, as well as the unique satisfaction which comes with any artisan profession.

"I look forward to coming to work, not just to get the money, but because I love my job," explained Mark, who has worked at Dunn's since joining as an apprentice in 1981.

"When I started, Mr Freeman told me I could eat what I wanted so I went mad, stuffing my face with sausage rolls and cream cakes non-stop for about two weeks. And after that I didn't eat any more," he smiled.

using huge wooden paddles. These ovens are about 60 years old, capable of reaching more than 250°C and churn out an incredible 700 to 800 loaves a day – with even more on Fridays ready for the Saturday-morning rush.

The tour continues upstairs in the room where cakes and cookies get iced. All around are stacks of Christmas cakes sitting in red boxes ready to be delivered to customers. Further along the shelf are tubs of dismembered Father Christmas legs ready to be inserted upside-down into cakes shaped like chimneys and boxes of every sprinkle, ribbon and decoration you could imagine.

Though the Christmas puddings, which come in beautiful white china bowls and wrapped in muslin, are made in the autumn and fed with brandy to enhance the flavour, everything else is made in a frantic few weeks in December.

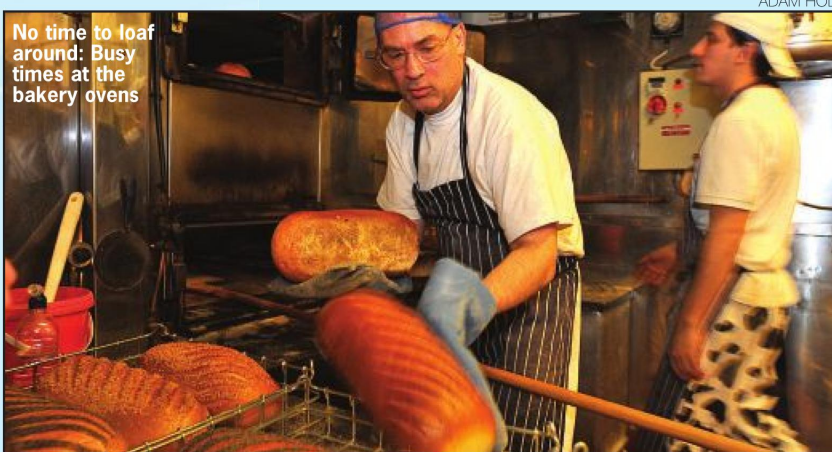

"It's pretty fast and furious at this time of the year," admitted Christopher.

"Christmas is a culmination of weeks of hard work coming together but at this time of the year, more than any other, it's not about price but about quality. People forget what they've spent when they're sitting around the table on Christmas Day – they just want something delicious and special.

"It is very busy as we are feeding a lot of people and it's a big responsibility to get it right. But," he added, smiling and gesturing to the mouth-watering window display of gingerbread houses, Dundee cakes and frosted Yule logs, "it's also a chance for us to show what we can do."

Seasonal advice: Markos Chrysostomou, director of Haringey Citizens' Advice Bureau, warns people against overstretching their finances at Christmas

Shoppers warned to be careful with debt at Christmas

By Lucy Purdy

SHOPPERS in Haringey have been urged to be careful with their cash this Christmas to avoid spiralling into debt.

The message from Haringey Citizens' Advice Bureau director Markos Chrysostomou is to be realistic and choosy when buying gifts and to enjoy spending the festive season with friends and family rather than running up uncontrollable debts.

Debt enquiries to the CAB's three branches in Haringey rose substantially after Christmas last year and continued to soar into March 2009 – so Mr Chrysostomou warned against extra spending over the festive season, leaving people with a debt hangover well into the new year.

"Some people go around spending on their credit cards in December and come January they are saddled with large bills," he explained.

"People have to be selective and not waste their money on things which are going to be thrown away. If you have families with lots of children, consider limiting the amount you will spend on each person to perhaps £5 and concentrate on things which are long-lasting."

Consumer debt problems handled by the CAB nationally have increased by 46 per cent in the past five years, with more than a million new debt cases being taken on by its advisers.

People are advised not to forget everyday bills such as mortgages, gas and electric in the seasonal excitement and to avoid running up an overdraft without talking to their bank first. Shoppers are also urged not to take out credit if they can afford to pay for goods outright by cash, cheque or debit card and to steer clear of store cards, which can charge interest rates of up to 30 per cent – not to mention turning to callous loan sharks.

There are CAB branches in High Road, Tottenham, in Willoughby Road, Turnpike Lane, and in Hornsey Town Hall in Crouch End. Visit www.adviceguide.org.uk to find out more.

Filling the House with festive treats

LANTERNS in trees, seals in the seas, carols and songs, Christmas sing-a-longs.

It's all happening this December as Lauderdale House embraces the festive season for all it's worth.

Various events for adults and children are planned at the arts centre in Highgate Hill, Highgate, over the next few weeks so we caught up with manager Katherine Ives for the full low-down.

"Well, it's already started with the tree dressing exhibition in the park," she said. "Local school children have been busy decorating nine trees with lots of colourful objects such as lanterns, planets, mobiles and even solar systems!"

The exhibition can be seen until Sunday – the same day as the popular Christmas Cabaret.

"We've got a return for Bad Girls' Nicole Faraday," she said, "And the reappearance of Rebecca Kane who performed for us last year. About 20 performers will be present including the wonderful Sister Mary McArthur."

More savoury diversions can be found in the house on December 21 when Lauderdale hosts Christmas Lantern Making from 3-5pm – for ages three to eight – followed by carols in the Christmas Sing-along at 5pm in the Long Gallery.

ADAM HOLT

Festive: Education officer Jill Wignall starts the tree decorations

"All that's left then, to round off our pre-Christmas entertainment, is a performance from Jactito Theatre company," said Katherine. "They have a mini-residency on December 22 and 23 and will be performing Sonia the Baby Seal's Christmas Adventure."

● For more details on all the events call the house on 020 8348 8716.

● THE culturally confused Vladimir McTavish is one of the star turns this Sunday, Downstairs at the King's Head in Crouch End. He will be joined by Nick Doody, Mike Wozniak, Will Marsh and Chris Mayo at the Comedy Variety Cabaret below the pub in Crouch End Hill. Tickets cost £7 (£5 concs) and doors open at 8pm. For more details and reservations call the box office on 020 8340 1028.

● COLD? Think hot. Tropical Island is billed as "the perfect winter retreat", guaranteed to warm up your festive season. gannets' restaurant awards

Put your favourite eatery on our menu of winners

WHAT makes a favourite restaurant?

Is it the "warm welcome," the "nice surroundings" or "the freshest-tasting fish"?

Of course it might also have something to do with the "excellent/freshly cooked/subtle/delicious" grub served up by some of the most "attentive/exemplary/friendliest/prompt/Scottish(!)" staff in town "who take a personal interest in you and look after their customers" with prices "more than reasonable" resulting in this being "the only Indian restaurant we will go to," or "the best French restaurant outside of France".

Then again, it could be the individual dishes such as the "lovely fishcakes," "the perfect Balti" or the "mussels to die for."

So far we have received scores of nomination forms from people keen to tell us about their

Nomination form for Gannets' Restaurant Award

Name and address of your chosen restaurant:

Reasons for nominating this restaurant (in no more than 25 words):

Your name:

Your address:

Category (Asian/ Rest of World/ Pub food):

Post your form to: Gannets' Awards, Haringey Advertiser, 4th Floor, Refuge House, 9-10 River Front, Enfield, EN1 3SZ top restaurants. "Reasons for nominating" vary considerably and we are looking forward to receiving many more before our competition is over.

Have you got a restaurant to tell us about? All you have to do is send in the form above telling us about your favourite eatery.

The top restaurant in each category will then be visited incognito by our gluttonous gang of gannets who will make the final decision on who will win our Restaurant of the Year Award 2009.

So rather than just keeping something good all to yourselves, share it with us and spread the word.

No fun in the Wild

Where The Wild Things Are (PG)

Dir: Spike Jonze

Starring: Max Records, James Gandolfini, Lauren Ambrose

FOR the past 40 odd years children have been entranced by Maurice Sendak's picture book, Where The Wild Things Are.

For the first 40-odd seconds they will certainly be captivated by Spike Jonze's film adaptation... before things go down quicker than Didier Drogba in a penalty area.

It opens brilliantly with cutesy indie music and snow scenes before the soundtrack switches violently to shouty rock and nine-year-old Max wrestling with his pet dog.

Unfortunately there is too much of the former and not enough of the latter in this sentimental, trite and dull retelling that fails on every count to bring magic and wonder to a multiplex near you this Christmas.

Max (Records) feels unloved and rejected. Dad's off the scene, mum (Catherine Keener) seems too busy with her new boyfriend and Max's older sister is too cool for a hyper-active little brother.

Donning his wolf costume, he legs it, finds a boat and heads to an island best described in the title – comprising a gang of 9ft-high hairy weirdos who like nothing better than destroying things, and elect mad Max as their king. None of the weirdos are endearing, and nothing that they do is that funny, instantly ensuring your child's attention is quickly distracted by the popcorn or other bored children around them.

Child in wolf's clothing: Max vents his spleen at his mum

Jonze also ensures older kids are also put off by the saccharine music and morals, while even older folk – adults, you could call them – will be bored to death by the lack of plot and characterisation to suggest Sendak's thin book was really not the best source material to adapt into a feature length film.

This is a surprise as Jonze – famed for Being John Malkovich and Adaptation – seemed the perfect maverick to animate those wonderful drawings and bring some of his own zaniness to proceedings. But this is a palpable miss and the only good thing is Records' believable performance that carries far more credibility than the rest of this ersatz enterprise.

Cracks (15)

As in not all it's cracked up to be... crackers... crack of doom. Jordan Scott's wretched adaptation of the book, set in an all girls' boarding school, is a confused mess with dialogue lamer than a dead dog.

Paranormal Activity (15)

Stunning low budget horror that is such a refreshing antidote to the genre's recent obsession for torture porn. A couple desperately try to document the increasing bumps in the night through a hand-held camera as Blair Witch gets a wicked makeover in petrified suburbia.

A Serious Man (15)

Too darned serious for its own good as the Coen brothers use their considerable talents to almost wilfully make a downbeat, reflective yet dull meditation on the meaning of life.

An oasis in a hectic world. Jane Campion's film captures the flourishing relationship between John Keats and Fanny Brawne before tragedy struck in 1821. Chamber piece of moods starring two perfectly cast actors: Ben Wishaw and Abbie Cornish.

"ESTABLISHED 1983"

A GAME OF TWO HALVES

The property market in 2009 was the tale of two halves.

Till June, things were somewhat "Hit and Miss" very little confidence and a bunch of nervous cautious buyers. Things were not looking good...

Then, we entered flaming June, the phones went into melt down and the property stock we had built up was soon "Under Offer".

So, what changed?!

Confidence returned to the market almost overnight. Was it the sunshine? No, because it's still here.

We currently have an abundance of qualified buyers waiting for all types of property to purchase.

We feel 2010 will be a very good year to buy and sell. Confidence will continue to strengthen and "word on the street" is that mortgages will be easier and less expensive to obtain.

If a move is your plan for the New Year, please contact us for a straight forward expert opinion from a seasoned property professional.

Wishing you all a "Happy Christmas" and peaceful Festive Season and a "Healthy Prosperous New Year".

BOSS FUMES AS SPURS BLOW IT

Injury blow: Palacios was carried off the pitch after earning Spurs a late penalty on Sunday

Tottenham surrender two-goal lead before Palacios hospitalised

By Lee Husson

SPURS boss Harry Redknapp was dealt a double blow on Sunday as he saw Wilson Palacios stretchered off with a rib injury before Jermain Defoe missed a last-gasp penalty as they blew a two-goal lead at Everton.

Tottenham looked set to be cruising towards victory after Defoe and Michael Dawson struck early in the second half in a pulsating game at Goodison Park.

But substitute Louis Saha pulled a goal back before Tim Cahill stooped to head home four minutes from time to net a late equaliser.

Goalkeeper Tim Howard then produced a vital spot-kick save from Defoe deep into added time after Palacios was barged over in the penalty box by Tony Hibbert – costing them the chance to return to third place and climb back above Arsenal.

“There looked only to be one winner,” said a dismayed Redknapp (pictured below) after the match.

“It was game over, we looked to be in control and I couldn’t see any way we weren’t going to go on and win.

“We had chances to go 3-0 up and then they pulled a goal back. It was poor defending, we got sucked in.

“They came on strong and it was a different game for ten minutes.

“Then we get a great chance to win it with a penalty with the last kick of the game.

“Robbie Keane is our penalty taker but you’d fancy the little man [Defoe] to score with the form he is in – but it wasn’t to be.”

Tottenham will now have to do without combative midfielder Palacios for some time after the Honduran was forced off the field after his clash with Hibbert.

“They took him to hospital and he was in pain,” Redknapp added.

“He’s a tough lad so it cannot be very good for him to be struggling with it like he is. “Hopefully he will be OK.”

Three is the magic number for Colney

Colney Heath 3 Haringey Borough 0
Molten Spartan Premier Division

A SPIRITED performance could not prevent Haringey Borough from slumping to a seventh consecutive defeat on Saturday as they came away empty handed from their trip to Colney Heath.

Although Borough enjoyed at least as much possession as their third-placed hosts, they were let down by some dreadful finishing – with the closest they came to scoring seeing Andrew Julius having a header cleared off the line during an excellent opening spell.

In stark contrast, the hosts were far more clinical and Borough keeper Nick Christofi was forced to make several good saves.

However, he was unable to prevent Ian Cooper from giving Colney Heath the lead from the spot before the break after Rafael Mwafyamu had been penalised for a tug in the box.

The home side stepped up a gear after half-time and finally scored the crucial second goal on 75 minutes – Phil Jackman being given far too much time and space to unleash a speculative shot which crept just inside Christofi’s right-hand post.

Joel Norris rounded off the scoring five minutes from time when he rose unchallenged at the far post to head home a corner.

Grant distraught as unbeaten record is KO’d in Prizefighter

MICHAEL GRANT cut a distraught figure after his unbeaten record was left in tatters in controversial circumstances as the Tottenham fighter fell short in his quest to be crowned king of the light-welterweights in Friday night’s Prizefighter tournament.

Grant fell at the first hurdle at London Olympia as he sustained a bad gash just above his eye in the first round of the opening fight of the night against the experienced former IBO lightweight champion Jason Cook, which eventually saw the bout stopped in the third round.

Cook opened up the cut with a crunching right hand early before a clash of heads deepened the wound further.

Grant battled bravely but was always on the back foot, and ref Ian John-Lewis signalled for a premature ending after taking another look at his damaged eye in the final round – much to the visible disgust of the 26-year-old.

The £32,000 tournament was eventually won by former WBA super-lightweight champion Gavin Rees.
